

July 2008

Marigold Industrial[®] launches hand protection leaflet for the agricultural sector.

Leading glove manufacturer Marigold Industrial[®] has launched a free leaflet aimed at people working in the agricultural sector, warning of the dangers of skin disease, dermatitis and hand injuries in the industry.

The free leaflet has been produced to help reduce the 3,500 working days that are lost every year in the agricultural sector as a result of injuries to the hands, fingers and wrists of workers.

In addition to providing information on how to prevent dermatitis, the new leaflet also advises on the glove materials that will provide the most effective protection against many of the tasks undertaken within the industry that pose a threat of injury.

Copies of the leaflet are available from Marigold Industrial Ltd on 0845 057 3355 (LoCall).

"The agricultural sector is a very tough environment in which to work with a great many manual tasks being undertaken that pose a threat of hand injury – mechanical and chemical.

"Thousands of days are lost every year to hand injuries that are very often easily preventable simply by wearing the right type of hand protection and we believe that this new leaflet will provide employers and workers in the agricultural sector with the type of advice and information to help protect their hands," said John Thorne of Marigold Industrial.

For a copy of the new leaflet, contact Marigold Industrial on 0845 057 3355 or email ukenquiries@marigold-industrial.com