

September 2009

Marigold Industrial® at A+A

Hand & Arm Protection expert Marigold Industrial®, part of the Comasec International Group (CMIG), will put the spotlight on its latest products at this year's A+A exhibition as well as unveiling its enhanced sales tools kit and HAP Suite™.

New products on the stand will include Puretough – a new formaldehyde-free water-based glove and the latest addition to the XRT range – the XRT Insulator™ designed to protect the hands against a range of mechanical hazards and specifically for those working outdoors in temperatures as low as –30°C.

The company will also be unveiling its enhanced sales tool kit which enables every member of the Marigold Industrial® team to be able to test, measure and recommend a glove best suited to the tasks being undertaken. New additions to the sales tool kit will include an oil grip test and finger marking test.

Also present at the event will be the further improved HAP Suite™, which has been designed by the company to support customers through a range of materials including a digital Audit Tool which calculates the best glove for the job, a grip test, providing a glove's grip performance rating in a range of environments, and the company's updated website.

"We will have a lot to show at this year's A+A exhibition – both from a new product development perspective and also through the wider range of customer support materials which we now have at our disposal," said Marigold Industrial's International Marketing Manager, Donald Gillespie.

For further information on Marigold Industrial and its complete product range visit:

marigold-industrial.com